

AdClub HATCH Award Submission

Category: Next Gen

Nomination: Jameson Noonan

I had the pleasure of teaching Jameson at Massachusetts College of Art & Design (MassArt). He is currently a senior in the communications program focusing on graphic design. The class he took from me was Advertising & Art Direction and he showed significant interest and progress over the semester. He has 2 campaigns that we entered for the Hatch Awards and he was selected and recognized by Ads of the World for both of the campaigns.

Jameson brings a keen design eye and conceptual thinking to his work. He has a great attitude and puts in the work to get things done right, not just done. His peers were eager to work with him and often looked to him for support or guidance on assignments.

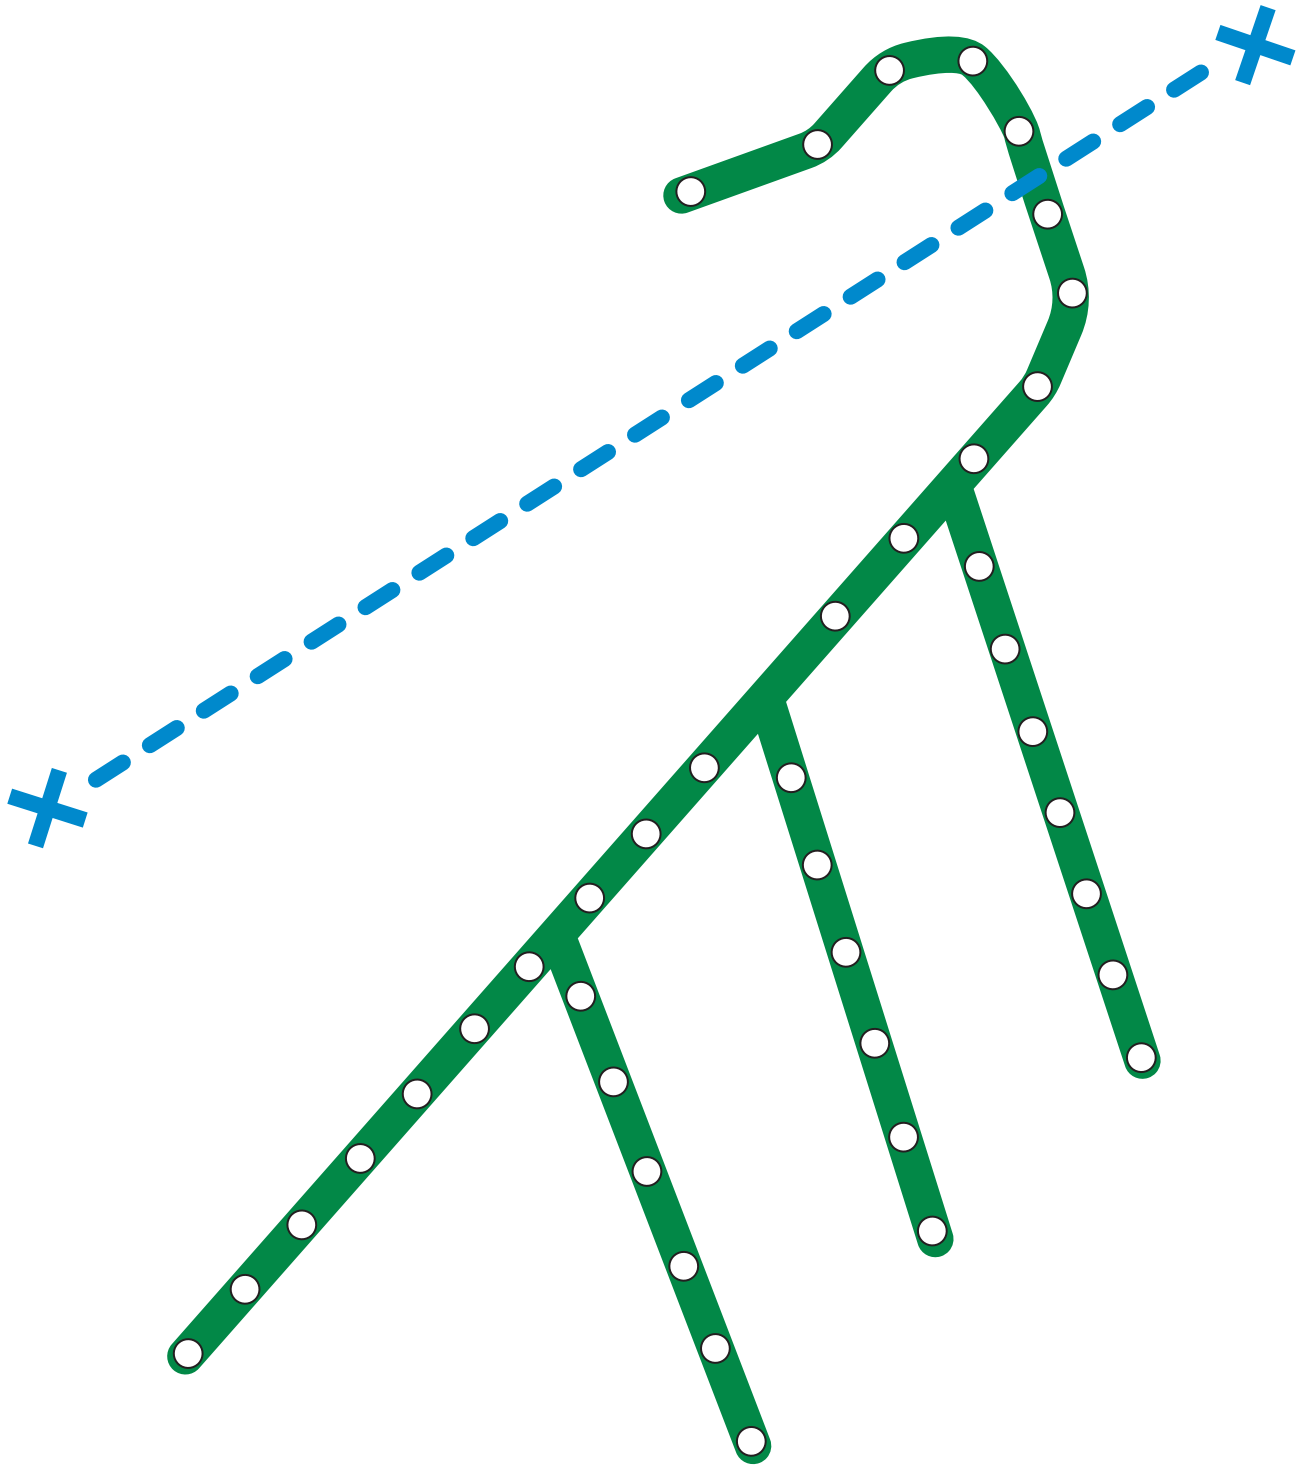

He has held internships at Hemedex, in Waltham, MA, and Advanced Instruments, in Norwood, MA during his undergraduate studies at MassArt.

I can't wait to see his career take off.

May I Sit There?

Most people would give up their seat if someone who would benefit more from it asked. However, asking for help can be embarrassing for some. Psychologists have actually studied this and found that asking strangers for a favor is incredibly unpleasant. People in need of accommodations should not have to specifically ask, people should just act.

What people is a nudge to give it up as soon as someone else might need that seat.

SMALL BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

visithalifax For today's #SmallBusinessSpotlight we stopped by our friends at @2BySeaHRM in Dartmouth! Two If By Sea Café is a bright and busy café where friends and families meet and the small business community convenes for their morning coffee. Upon opening in 2009, TIBS quickly became known for its baked goods: colossal croissants and super-sized scones are just the tip of the homespun iceberg. Neighbours and master roasters, Anchored Coffee, provide the epic brew. There is no shortage of love at TIBS. Stop by for yourself in Founder's Square in Dartmouth, or visit their website, linked in our bio! #DiscoverNovaScotia

8 Day Trips for $10 with the Commuter Rail Weekend Pass

The 7.5-hour, 6-mile-per-hour, 100-mile-per-hour train gets you to the heart of the action.

Responding to the popularity of its $10 Commuter Rail weekend pass, the MBTA has made the deal permanent, allowing commuters unlimited travel in all zones on Saturdays and Sundays. Now there is no excuse to stick around town on a beautiful New England weekend. You just have to know where to go and how to get there.

The program saw 180,000 weekend passes sold in its first six months and has been especially popular for people heading south. Zone 8, travel to the South Shore on the Kingston & Plymouth Line and ending right on the water near beautiful Gray's Beach Park, was the most popular for those taking advantage of the pass.

The $10 weekend ticket is available on the mTicket mobile app and at North Station, South Station, and Back Bay Station.

Salem

Everyone knows Salem is famous for the late 17th century Salem Witch Trials, but there's much more to see here than just witches. Take the Peabody Essex Museum, renowned for its Asian art and artifacts, including a centuries-old Qing era Chinese home. And Salem has great eats, like the spicy and named Witch's Sugar Cafe, shops, and festivals. And if you're a history buff, there's the Salem Witch Museum. October is a popular time to visit, but this Halloween town is fun to visit year-round.

Take a Newburyport/Rockport Line train four stops from North Station to the Salem station in downtown Salem.

Newburyport

At the tip of the North Shore, visit Newburyport, a lovely coastal town with beaches, tourist attractions, and a rich history. Newburyport is the birthplace of the US Coast Guard, so head to the Custom House Maritime Museum to learn more. If you're looking for an excellent picnic spot or a walk along the water, go to Waterfront Park, a boardwalk that runs along the Merrimack River. Enjoy the town's abundance of shops, galleries, and restaurants as well. For a less casual sit-down meal, check out Michael's Harbor-side, with views overlooking the water.

Take a Newburyport/Rockport Line train 10 stops from North Station to the Newburyport station.

Providence

Whether your best is art, music, or just exploring a new tourist town (and another great college town), you'll want to check out Providence, R.I., just an hour south of Boston. From the Rhode Island School of Design Museum of Art to the Providence Performing Arts Center, there's something for everyone. Take a stroll down bustling Thayer Street. When you get hungry, head over to the popular and cheap, East Side Pockets for some Mediterranean fare—falafel, labneh, qatna, and more. Plus, here's an ideal opportunity to visit friends at Brown, Providence College, or RISD for a weekend.

Take a Providence/Stoughton Line train eight stops from South Station to the Providence station.

Plymouth

On the coast southeast of Boston, visit the spot where the Pilgrims landed and Massachusetts, and New England for that matter, began. Nearing its 400th anniversary, Plymouth is home to a wealth of colonial history, from Plymouth Rock and the Mayflower II (currently being restored at the Mystic Seaport) to Plimoth Plantation. There are also plenty of other museums, monuments, and historical societies to visit. For lunch, consider Dillon's Local, a family-operated food joint with traditional American food. Plus, there's the Americana Theatre Company, popular breweries and wineries, and countless other spots to explore.

Rockport

Spring is an ideal time to take a day trip to beautiful Rockport on Cape Ann, a town full of beaches, shops, and culture. The picturesque Halibut Point State Park, a sprawling landscape of rocky trails leading to the Atlantic, is a must. There's also the Straitsmouth Island Lighthouse, built in 1835 and still maintained. While you're out by the coast, stop by Roy Moore Lobster Co. for your fill of seafood. Grab a sweater and some hiking boots and go!

Take a Newburyport/Rockport Line train 11 stops from North Station to the Rockport station.

Walden Pond

If you're looking for a Transcendental trip back to the 1800s, Concord's Walden Pond State Reservation is a must-see. Visit the pond where legendary writers and philosophers Henry David Thoreau and Ralph Waldo Emerson got their inspiration. You can swim, hike, picnic, boat, or just sit and ponder life's great questions. You can even see furniture from Thoreau's original cabin in the nearby Concord Museum. There are no restaurants near the reservation, so if you're hungry, look out for a pair of pizza shops next to the station.

Take a Fitchburg Line train seven stops from North Station to the Concord station. The Walden Pond State Reservation are just a few minutes' drive from there.

Ipswich

Having trouble deciding between a historic old town feel versus something more beachy? Well, now you don't have to decide, because Ipswich has both. This North Shore town is home to the magnificent Castle Hill, a lavish English-style mansion with beautiful gardens and a huge lawn sloping down to the seashore.

The catch is it's a few miles from the rail station, so hop on an easy bus to get you back and forth. Once you're done there, you can take a few steps over to Crane Beach, a 1,234-acre conservation and recreational beach. This four-mile-long beach also features sandy dunes and a beautiful maritime pitch pine forest.

Take a Newburyport/Rockport Line train eight stops from North Station to the Ipswich station.

Middlesex Falls

If you're looking to escape city life and enjoy nature for the day, check out the Middlesex Falls Reservation for hiking, fishing, boating, and other outdoor activities. Spanning more than 2,200 acres spread out across Malden, Medford, Melrose, Stoneham, and Winchester, the Falls offers visitors over 100 miles of mixed-use trails, mountain bike trails, fishing, kayak and canoe rentals, and on- and off-leash areas for those with canine companions. There are a few restaurants bordering the Falls, like J.J. Grimby & Co., but we recommend immersing in nature and bringing a picnic meal and a blanket.

Take a Haverhill Line train two stops from North Station to the Wyoming Hill station, then walk 15 minutes to the Falls.

The Students' Guide To Eating Around Boston

SARA CIVIAN

With as many different backgrounds there are in Boston, its no surprise that the food scene is out of this world with more many options to choose from than you could imagine. Throw in a student population of over 152,000 in Boston alone, there is a need for cheap and delicious options. Be sure to check out this guide on your grub journey as a student in Beantown!

There are lots of places selling $1 oysters in Boston, so you'll find it easy to get a taste of the sea on your student budget. The Island Creek Oyster Bar is one of the best places in town to sample these local delicacies at one of the best prices in all of Boston, too.

Served warm or cold, lobster rolls are a Boston staple. Neptune Oyster serves a simple but effective version drizzled with drawn butter and accompanied by hot, crispy fries. The perfect antidote to a cold and chilly Boston day is a bowl of warm and hearty chowder, with freshly baked bread on the side.

Boston has had a flourishing craft beer scene ever since the Samuel Adams Company and John Harvard's Cambridge Brewing Company and John Harvard's Cambridge Brewery and Ale House in the township of Cambridge are just a couple of the breweries causing a stir. CBC's annual Four First and an extensive pumpkin beer party are normally the highlights of the brewery's packed events calendar.

Invented at the Financial District's Parker House in 1856, the Boston cream pie is now the official state dessert. This classic American favourite is probably one of the easiest to find in the restaurants of Boston.

There are plenty of amazing ice cream joints in Boston—so many you'll be spoilt for choice—but Youcan't's is regularly voted the best of the bunch. In fact, the New York Times dubbed their offerings the 'world's best ice cream' which is an earned title.

Aside from great restaurants, locally brewed beer and weekend markets, Boston has a decent number of mobile food trucks that service the city with both affordable and high-quality meals in a few locations.

Whether you're after top-notch seafood, classic American comfort fare or something to satisfy your sweet tooth, Boston's eclectic food scene will provide. In a city famous for lobster rolls and oysters, there are plenty of student-friendly eateries around town that won't break the bank, so make the most of it!
