Dressed like extras in Dune, a cast of models highlight what Hamcus describes as "the final chapter of dust universe[s] storyline season 1." Incorporating over 100 unique pieces, the expansive collection is inspired by "neo-apocalyptic brutalism," which informs the technical dye processes that grant hoodies, jackets, trousers, vests, shirts and hats their uniquely faded colors.

Bisimoto Engineering x ACRONYM

California's Bisimoto Engineering is currently working with ACRONYM designer and co-founder, Errolson Hugh, and concept design artist, Khyzyl Saleem to rework the famous 1970s Porsche 935 Moby Dick.

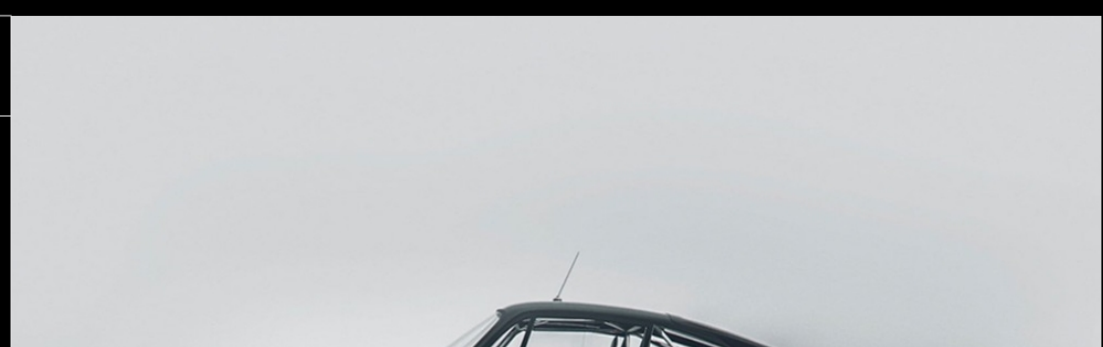

+Adventure -Limits

Bisimoto expects to tap into Saleem's adventurous automotive stylings to further accentuate the Longtail shape of the Porsche for the "Moby X". Additionally, the reconstruction features a modernized set of aero-shaped LED headlights on both sides of the bumper, a reworked center front fascia, and custom aero bits that match the side skirt extensions.

Though Bisimoto plans to keep the general silhouette of the automotive, the most visible posterior alteration comes from the morphing massive wing into a wickerbill, as well as the Cyberpunk-style LED bar.

OUR STORY ▶

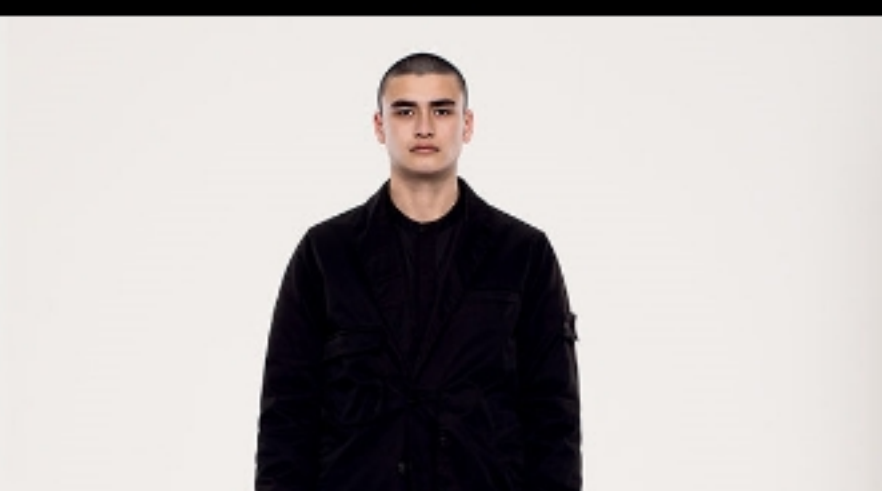

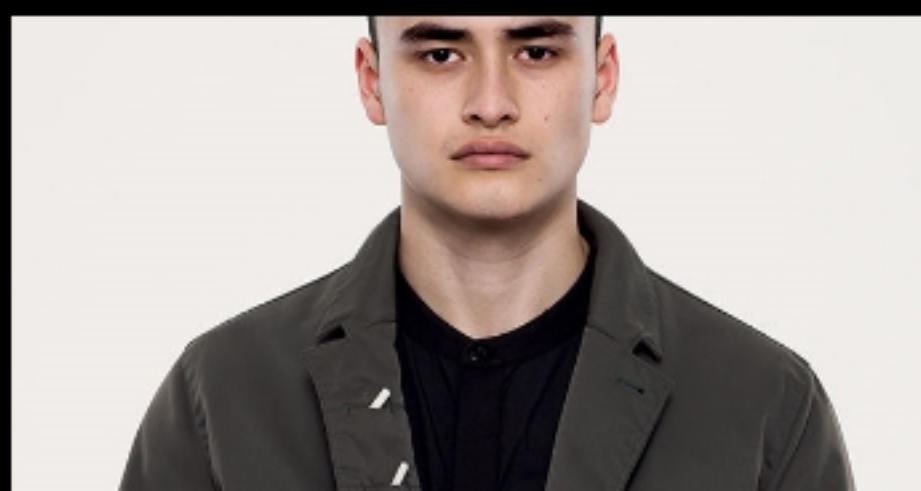

It's a question of blending aesthetics and functionality for the appropriate environment. Military camo gear has a function in the forest but worn in the city it becomes an aesthetic choice. A ski jacket is perfect for the slopes, but when you're facing winter in the city, you want an insulated jacket the blends into its environment. Whatever the season, for those living in the city who want protection camouflaged in urban apparel, it's techwear. *

For the outdoor adventurer exploring the backcountry, hiking boots and a lightweight softshell are the way to go. The trendsetter might not pick the most practical outfit, but the look will get people talking. James Bond, with all of his gadgets and souped-up cars, is seen heading to the Scottish Highlands wearing Barbour. His ability to blend into his environment makes it possible to seamlessly go from wearing a suit to a rugged waxed cotton jacket.
