World Music Radio

Typically the term “world music” just means “not from here.”

Which is ironic given the name itself is the most inclusive.

Shouldn't world music be for everyone no matter who you are or where you're from?

So instead of a term designed to eliminate nuance, we're going to redefine “world music.”

To bring people together. To share a celebratory cultural experience.

To create an interstellar sonic passport for your ears and provide access to a supernatural radio broadcast at the speed of light.

Not just for america, or europe, but for every corner of the universe.

This astrophysical musical journey taps into an elusive energetic frequency called “the vibe.”

— An auditory experience emitting a wave of bliss, inspiration and ultimate connection.

And where this frequency can metaphysically transport you to saturday night.

Even if it's tuesday morning.

This is world music radio. Tune in.

World Music Radio

Scientists have discovered a “strange and persistent” radio signal from a far-off galaxy that sounded like a heartbeat.

It is classified as a fast radio burst, FRB.

The astrophysical origins of FRBs are unknown but this newly discovered signal is particularly far-reaching.

B₄

It is believed by some that this highly unusual signal has been intentionally sent forth throughout the known universe by a being called B₄ (aka Billy Bob Bo Bob)—an interstellar traveling griot, or alien, who’s been curating and collecting the purest expressions, or “vibes,” and broadcasting them outwards for millennia.

No one knows why or how but one thing is certain: this broadcast will change you if you find a way to tune into it. Most recently, we found B₄ on the planet Earth, and his signal now bears the name World Music Radio (WMR).

Upon observing

Earth and seeking out the music of the world, Billy Bob discovered that typically the term "world music" just means "not from here." Which is ironic given the name itself is the most inclusive. Shouldn't world music be for everyone no matter who you are or where you're from?

So instead of a term designed to eliminate nuance, we're going to redefine world music. To bring people together. To share a celebratory cultural experience. To create an interstellar sonic passport for your ears and provide access to a supernatural radio broadcast at the speed of light.

Not just for America, or Europe, but for every corner of the universe.

This aurophysical musical journey taps into an elusive energetic frequency called "The Vibe" — an auditory experience eliciting a wave of bliss, inspiration and the ultimate connection. And where this frequency can metaphysically transport you to Saturday night. Even if it's Tuesday morning.
